If you're having another case of the Mondays, fear not. Florida Man is here to save your sadness and shine some sun on the start of your week.

A number of friends brought Alex Morrison's utterly unique brand of comedy to me earlier this year. A handful of those friends were blue collar lads from rural North Carolina. Another was your mom's favorite cowboy. I even had a super liberal, woke til-she-goes-broke girlfriend send me his videos to cheer up my sadness, so I'm passing this incredible content on to you today, dear readers.

Below is my personal favorite skit of Morrison's, the one all my friends sent to me. Once you're done watching it at least five times, carry on scrolling to learn more about this brilliant new mulletted mind in American comedy.

“I came from a blue collar background where there are wrenches, hammers and paint brushes, drugs are never far behind! I’m not easily offended,” Morrison told me. “I grew up in a place that was nothing but assholes and elbows. I worked with two men that committed murder! One was on national news! His name was [redacted]. My comedy has always been punching up observational comedy! Like skits on my bosses or people I work with. Anytime I get in a bind or really have something terrible happen I write about it.”
